

Mónica Santana
JAZZ SINGER & COMPOSER

Introducing her new record
"I'm gonna love you"

JAZZ SINGER & COMPOSER

Her first album "I'm gonna love you" shows the melodic taste in his vocal quality, taking the great step with her own arrangements and sounds that place it as a great reference among jazz composers of the spanish national scene.

Mónica Santana, singer and songwriter born in Las Palmas de Gran Canaria, she began vocal musical studies and guitar at the age of 11.

Through one of her teachers, she introduces herself with traditional Canarian music and participates in Tabona folk formation. She shared the stage with singers like Olga Cerpa (Mestisay) and María Pérez (Enchanting)

It is important the mention of her participation in the recording "Nana Enea" by Ricardo Montelongo.

After years for interpreting, she decides to record her first work as a composer. Under the musical manager of Miki Delgado and Miguel Ramírez, she manages to define the album entitled "I, m gonna love you".

In it she presents his own creations, in addition to two versions. They are themes that sound from the bossa, to swing, bolero to blues.
